that is why people who have undergone surgery to remove much of their small bowel are at increased risk of developing osteoporosis they range in age from teenagers to the elderly, and they come from a variety of socioeconomic backgrounds